Grief, death, loss, and bereavement are pervasive and fundamental aspects of the human experience. An understanding of the grief process and the ways in which counselors may compassionately respond to the bereaved is essential to effectively practice in all settings and with all age groups. The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the nature and centrality of the experience of loss and subsequent grief in their personal lives, in the lives of their clients, and in their role as professional helpers. Emphasis is placed on the variety and types of loss experienced throughout the life cycle and ways in which counselors may address grief related needs with persons across the life span. Throughout the course attention is given to cultural diversity and norms, the wide variation in the grief experience, the importance of social justice and human rights, the influence of the developmental phase of the life span, identification of interventions that are evidence based, and recognition of the capacities, resilience, and growth of individuals and families confronted with loss.
