Workshop in Adult and Higher Education: Race and Ethnicity in the Formation of American Higher Education.

"The problem of the twentieth century is the problem of the color-line" - W.E.B. DuBois

Since the establishment of Harvard (College) University in 1636, the American system of higher education has been affected and influenced by race and ethnicity. These areas have influenced the public and social policy of American higher education and lead to the formation of institutions aimed at educating many marginalized populations. This course will explore some of the laws that affected access along the racial and ethnic lines, while also taking an in-depth look at the historical and social development of affinity colleges and universities such as Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs), Tribal Colleges and some ethno-religious institutions like Notre Dame, Brandeis and BYU. Ultimately, the course will assist one in gaining an insight into the legal, racial and ethnic policies that shaped American Higher Education, and its role into the creation of many of the Nation's niche

Workshop in Adult and Higher Education - Gender and Higher Education:

Recently, there has been an increasing focus on gender in higher education research and practice. Scholars and practitioners are taking note not only of the differential outcomes for students in relation to gender, but are also discussing how systems of privilege and oppression (e.g., sexism, masculinity, trans* oppression) mediate college environments. Furthermore, there has been a call by some to address gender in expansive, non-binary ways that include students with diverse genders beyond just thinking about ""men"" and/or ""women."" In this class, students will survey the current literature regarding gender in higher education, as well as discuss how policies and practices both inhibit and promote expansive understandings of gender as a social identity. Students will also develop educational interventions that reflect this literature.

This course will be totally on-line with synchronous on-line meetings on Thurs from 3:00-6:00pm on 6/22, 7/6, 7/20 and 8/3. The remainder of the course
